About Kate

I am an experienced Chief Executive, entrepreneur, director and management consultant. I am a big-picture thinker with a practical bent – I can both dream the dream and make it happen. I have been successful in business and in the not-for-profit world.

Since 2005 I have been Executive Director of the Todd Foundation (www.toddfoundation.org.nz), one of New Zealand's first and most prestigious family foundations. My mandate has been to make the foundation more strategic and effective; this has included working to establish a clear vision and goals that our funding should help achieve, changing the way we fund so that fewer organisations are funded longer and better, encouraging collaboration and partnerships in the sector and more than tripling our grant making budget. I am also active in philanthropy in my personal life, having established our own small family charitable trust in 2003 after the sale of our business, The Web Limited.

My previous role was as Managing Director of The Web Limited, an internet start-up in 1995 that grew into a leading Internet development company with 40 staff in two locations. I continued to manage the company through its successful acquisition by KPMG Consulting, meeting all the growth and profitability targets set by the new owners while maintaining high staff morale and excellent client relationships.

My work draws from my recognised and award-winning management expertise, my experience as a Project Manager and Business Analyst, my background in English Literature and writing, and my training as a volunteer counsellor and group facilitator.
